

Shakespeare Bulletin copyright guidance (updated June 2024)

Introduction

Authors are responsible for ensuring that appropriate permissions have been obtained for reproduction of copyrighted material. Failure to obtain permission may result in delay of publication. When in doubt, please discuss with the General Editor, who is happy to help.

Any costs associated with obtaining permission to use copyright material will usually be borne by the author. Authors who do not have access to institutional funding and are unable to afford the permissions for necessary images may contact the General Editor to discuss potential funding options.

Epigraphs and fair use of quoted material

Quotations from written text as part of the body of an article are usually considered fair use. Please take particular care to check if quotations from contemporary poetry or song lyrics require additional permissions. Long quotations (over 100 words) from newspapers and other commercial periodicals may require permission from the copyright holder.

Please note that epigraphs do not qualify as fair usage, and thus epigraphs using copyrighted material will usually not be permissible without explicit permission.

Images

Shakespeare Bulletin encourages the use of images to accompany articles and reviews. It is the responsibility of the author to obtain appropriate permissions. Please refer carefully to the guidance below.

Preferred format

TIFF or high-quality JPEG. Images should be 300 ppi (pixels per inch).

Quantity of images

There is no upper limit on the number of images that may be included in an article; however, articles must adhere to agreed word counts. A portrait image is roughly the equivalent of 390 words; a landscape image of 180 words. Please factor this into your overall word count. In general, we encourage authors to use images that have a bearing on the article's argument, rather than for purely illustrative purposes.

Permissions

Please ensure that you have obtained permission from the rights holder. Permission must be granted for nonexclusive world rights to publish the media work as part of the Journal only in all languages for the electronic editions of the issue, including archiving.

Please contact the editor for a Copyright Permissions Form to be signed by the rights holder.

For performance reviews, images provided directly by a theater's/company's press department are sufficient and do not require further permission. However, images must always be obtained from the official source; use of an image by another media outlet does not license re-use in SB.

For screengrabs from films, permission is not normally required. Please ensure that screengrabs are of sufficient quality for use. For screengrabs of live digital theater or other forms of broadcast live performance, however, please obtain permission from the company even if the screengrab is your own.

Captions

Please place captions at the point in your article where you wish the article to be displayed. The precise placement will depend on page layout. Captions must contain all permissions information, and a clear description of what is depicted. Examples as follows:

Film

Fig.1: Prospera's rage in The Tempest (dir. Julie Taymor, 2010). Screengrab.

Textual images

Fig. 1: Title page, The Spanish Tragedy (1615), reproduced by permission of the British Library. Tale of two avengers: in an image telescoping scenes, Bel-imperia co-stars with Hieronymo.

Fig. 1: Shakespeare, The Tragedie of Othello, Bodleian Library, University of Oxford, Arch. G c. 7, vv3r

Theatrical images

Fig. 3: Virgilia (Wendy Morgan) and Coriolanus (Ian McKellen) in Coriolanus, dir. Peter Hall. National Theatre, 1984. Photo by John Haynes, courtesy of John Haynes/Lebrecht Music & Arts.

Re-use of previously published work

All submissions should represent work that has not been published before. If the article requires republication of sections of previously published work, please discuss with the General Editor and ensure that you have permission from the copyright holder. Authors may reuse their work for Shakespeare Bulletin in future publications as long as SB is credited; details are included in author publication agreement forms.